APPROVAL GIVEN WIDENING PLANS BY CITY COUNCIL

Our Daly City Fathers met in adjourned session at the City Hall on Monday evening of this week.

The principal matter of business was action on the request of the State Highway Commission that the plans submitted by its engineers for the widening of Mission street through this city be given the stamp of approval by the council.

After discussion, it seemed there was no valid objection to the plans as submitted and the same were approved.

This puts the finishing touches on all technicalities with reference to this project and everyone is now resting easy with the idea of a job well done which will soon be completed.

Uncle Sam Provides For Comstock Lode Comeback

By J. W. MARCHBANK
(Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work)

For a period of a few years at least the Comstock is coming back to life, and all through the carefully worked out program of the Roosevelt administration in not only giving a helping hand to manufacturing and railroading and financing but to that basic industry—mining. After quite a spell of blasting of hopes of an earlier consummation of the plans for the assistance to the miners of the country, the machinery of the Federal Goverment is very much in motion.

The first of the loans of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to a mining enterprise is one of $160,000 to the Sutro Tunnel Coalition for the purpose of carrying forward the company's operations at the mine known as the Crown Point. The company is a subsidiary of the Comstock Tunnel and Drainage Company, owner of Crown Point and several other old properties at the south end of the Comstock district.

The ore body is of recent development and it is expected at present prices of gold and silver its value will be $2,000,000 and $3,000,000. A portion lies beneath the tracks of the Virginia and Truckee Railroad and it will be necessary to move a section of the railroad to mine the ore.

In a highly entertaiing article in the Sacramento Bee, Lyman Clark, a veteran newspaperman of Virginia City, was given the credit for furnishing interesting information about the mine. He stated the Crown Point ore was first opened by the present management while driving a tunnel into the side of a mountain north of the Gold Hill school house. It was found easterly of what old time operators apparently mistook for the true wall of the vein, and beyond which they did not push their workings. More than 150,000 tons of ore have already been blocked out, according to the estimates of the engineers. Gold values predominate.

The Crown Point was one of the bonanza mines of the Comstockand its known production was $34,000,000. Prominent men connected with the property in those days were W. S. Hobart, United States Senator, J. P. Jones, and Alvinza Hayward.

As was recently pointed out in an Leonard of Virginia City is general manager incharge of operations. Franklin Leonard of New York and manager Leonard are the controlling factors. The company also owns and operates the Sutro Tunnel, built years ago by Adolph Sutro. It is a bore nine miles in length which taps all the principal mines of the Comstock district.

As was recently pointed out inan able editorial in the Vancouver Sun, England did not hesitate to go off the gold standard when abandonment of that policy meant her financial salvation. The "old country" no more fears experimentation in monetary matters than President Roosevelt when cutting loose from the past seems in order on account of the enormous changes in the economic structure wrought by technological advance.

Part of the editorial is as follows:

"If Britain's course back to economic normality has seemed less spectacular than that of United States, it is because Britain has been twenty years ahead of United States in social legislation.

"It was unnecessary for her to go through the parliminary exercises of setting up machinery to deal with great masses of men in straitened circumstances.

"Britain has no desire to play the role of paragon in the current batle against depression. Indeed, many of her reported gains have probably been overstated.

"But working herself quietly and unobtrusively free of the chains of tradition, she has put herself in the position of doing firmly and without hesitation those things which have to be done.

"It is good to know that President Roosevelt appreciates that fact."

It heartens us to read in the northern journal, that, inthe editor's opinion President Roosevelt, in his last address over the radio, spoke not as the leader of a political party, but as head of the greatest English-speaking group and as the world's leading Liberal.

LEST WE FORGET! BOOST OUR BAND!

The campaign of soliciting subscriptions for the purchase of uniforms for our Daly City Band has begun in earnest, and you may be called upon at any time. It is the duty of every public spirited citizen to respond to the fullest extent.

Remember, the band will be available for all public functions and will be one of the best advertisements this community could possess.

A number of community minded citizens have taken a keen interest in this matter and a movement is now on foot for a monster whist party, the proceeds of which will be given toward the uniform fund.

A communication has been sent to the City Council of Daly City, requesting their endorsement and support in outfiting the band, which will no doubt meet with an encouraging response. The committee will wait on the council at its next meeting.

Don't fail to do your part when the committee calls on you.

The Spirit Of The Times

(By Maude Larue Ives)

On Thanksgiving, as well as every other day in the year, we can always find something to be grateful for; as, for example—our health, our homes and our loved ones, the food we are fortunate enough to have to eat, etc.

Let's add another item to our list this season: "We voted for the school bonds." Next November, and many more years to come, we can look upon the three new school buildings with civic pride and thanksgiving, for was it not our vote that helped bring all this about?

Most of us are already planning on the purchases we would like to make for our children at Xmas time, perhaps a bicycle for Junior or a gold watch for Mary. Most of us find it necessary to resort to the budget plan, but we do it, nevertheless, so that our families, be they large or small, may have luxuries—even—that our parents were unable to secure for us when we were youngsters.

We sacrifice and budget for other things. Now let's lay aside a few cents more and have these three new and modern school buildings, which now can be secured at a great saving. They will not only be a benefit to our own sons and daughters, but to every future junior citizen for years to come.

It's the same GRAND OLD XMAS SPIRIT all over again; sharing with those we love—giving. When we vote for the school bonds we are responding unselfishly, for the benefits enjoyed through this act by our offspring will be experienced by every other boy and girl in this BIG little city of ours.

SO GO OUT AND VOTE FOR THE SCHOOL BONDS on Friday, November 2nd, and make that day a Red Letter Day in the history of our beloved community of Daly City.

DALY CITY BOY SCOUTS GOOD IN STOCKTON CAMP

Have Great Time and Win Praise For Novel Stunts In Wide Open Spaces

The northern California Boy Scouts' Camporall (convention) was held in Stockton, October 13 and 14 at Oak Park, where 2300 Boy Scouts proved that they could go out into the great open spaces and set up a camp of pup tents, eat and be happy.

Six scouts of Daly City's Troop No. 48 set up a camp that looked as if they had been born and raised out of dors. So complete was their camp that Chief Hanson of the San Francisco Scouts took time to ask questions about their work. Dish rack, towel rack and tables made from branches of dead trees were the envy of other troops who copied the idea. In scouting the boys must learn to make up equipment in camp from the surroundings of the camp—stoves from rocks, reflector ovens from tin cans, dish racks and tables from stumps and discarded pieces of trees and lumber, beds from leaves, and cooking utensils from tin cans.

No canned goods were permitted and the scouts had to plan to cook six meals, packing all foods with them from Daly City. This is only a part of what the scout must learn in his climb up the road to become an Eagle Scout. James Utman, Peter Tolovi, Paul Tolvovi, Dale Ruthledge, Francis Olsen and Clarence Smith were the chosen scouts to put on this fine camp at Stockton, and an excellent example

"There are encourging signs that at last most of the leading industrial and business interests of the country are seeing the folly of obstruction and are prepared whole heartedly to back the President as they did following the bank holiday. FIREMEN OF SAN MATEO COUNTY IN REGULAR SESSION

Consolidation Is Principal Subject That Comes Up For Long Discussion

The Associated Firemen of San Mateo County held the regular monthly meeting at Brisbane, Tuesday of this week. A goodly attendance was present. The subject of annexation of San Francisco and San Mateo counties was discussed. The association has it from good authority that in the event of annexation the volunteer firemen, who for so many years have served the various communities in the county, are to be entirely forgotten in the proposed merger.

The firemen are up in arms because of the lack of consideration by both San Francisco and San Mateo County authorities for their chosen vocation as firemen. They contend that, if they are able to serve the peninsula now with excellent fire service as volunteers or as part time pay firemen, then they should receive proper consideration in case of annexation.

Many of the firemen, present expressed themselves as against with the idea of being shelved under the new set up. It was their opinion that a majority of the present fire service men in the peninsula are able bodied and trained for the work. Those of the old-timers are willing to step out of the picture and affiliate with veteran organizations.

At this meeting a resolution was drawn up, condemning the actions of the promoters of annexation for their disregard of the volunteers. Copies of the resolution are to be sent to all departments of the county and to the press. The firemen believe that their past service as volunteers has shown the tax payers and insurance payers just what an asset these boys have been to our county.

The next regular meeting will be held at Bayshore City, when speakers will address the members on this subject.

Not satisfied with merely crowing Juliette Proctor as "Miss Santa Rosa," the city of Santa Rosa, Cal., also gave her a 12,000 mile trip.

Uncertain, Coy and Hard to Please

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

They ain't no reg'lar bath tubs, but me an' John every Sunday strips off, shipboard an' pours buckets of water over each other.

"Yep," said the old boat builder, "brother John an' me is out of the tourist business. We figgered, there bein' not much doin' in our own line that we might put up log cabins on the old place for folks to stay in overnight, or mebbe a week at a time. Most everybody that's got a piece of ground between here an Machias does it, an' makes money, so they tell me, but I guess the women folks does the most of the tendin' to it. I thought once that puttin' a boat together so she would ride the water like a duck was quite a leetle trick, but it ain't nawthin' to fixin' up a camp so it will please a woman.

"Bein' mechanics from boys up, buildin' the cabins wasn't no trouble. We just drew along the rud a piece an' see what the shacks that the farmers had built was like; then we come home, got the lumber from town, an' built us five of 'em. There they be now. Take a look at 'em an' tell me if you ever seen anything that could beat 'em for the right draft an' beam. They's everything into 'em. Hot air stoves for chilly weather, pictures of the world's biggest battles that we got out of a history book our grand dad left us when he died an' an' all the tin ware an' chiny anybody needs to get a meal together with.

"Just to give the place a home like touch, we took a trip around some of the farms an' got some things to pretty 'em up, like tidies for the chairs an' artificial flowers an' wall mottoes. When we had everything ready an' invitin' we put up a sign: 'Camps, night, day an' weeks if you want 'em' out by the big rud and sure enough right away folks begun to come in.

"But they was a kind of folks that was different from any me an' John had ever see. The first was a woman about sixty with a husband a little older. Before she would even look at one of the camps she began to ask questions of me.

"'Are these places clean?' says she. 'They don't look it.'"

"'They're bran new, ma'am,' I says. 'Never been lived in.'"

"'Are the furnishings adequate?'"

"'They're the adequatest furnishings money can buy,' I says wonderin' what she was talkin' about."

"'Very well, I'll look at them.'"

"I was goin' along, but she waved me away. 'I'll let you know our decision,' she says, an' takin' the bunch of keys I give her off she went, her husband trailin' along behind her."

"I was just thinkin' how pleased an' surprised she'd be, when back she come, hot foot."

"'There's no bawth in that first cabin,' she says. 'Have any of them bawths?'"

"'Well, no, not exactly.'"

"'Just what do you mean, by not exactly?'"

"'I mean they ain't no reg'lar bath tubs, but me an' John every Sunday strips off, ship-board fashion an' pours buckets of water over each other. They ain't nothin' like it for givin' you a appetite for breakfast.'"

"I don't know yet what made the old dame so mad, but she just reddened up like she'd been insulted, squabbles a while about who was goin' to drive, and then up the rud they go.

"It was two days later before anybody else showed up, an' then it was a woman with three daughters, who was pleased with the first cabin we showed 'em an' real sociable. They was all over the place, makin' friends with the dog an' the cow an' askin' all sorts of questions. They stayed the fust night an' would of stayed the second all right if it hadn't turned foggy. It was about midnight when they was a rap on our door an' there was two of the girls standin' there shiverin' but terrible mad.

"Before I had a chance to say anythin' or ask 'em anythin' the oldest spoke up an' says: 'Why don't you do something about that cow. Listen to the poor thing.'

"'I don't hear no cow,' I said. 'The only cow we got is in the barn.'

"'Well, it's somebody's cow, and we just can't bear to hear it crying that way. You must find out about it at once, or we shall leave.'

"'Well, I'd heard other fellers in the business say that guests must be pleased at any cost, so I slipped on some cloe's an' went out with them. We started down the rud without hearin' nothing, an' then we come up over a little hill an' one of the gals says. 'There she is now, poor dear.'

"'Where?' says I, pretty puzzled.

"'Right out there. Do you mean to say you don't hear it?'

"Then of a sudden I knew what it was all about. Three miles up the river the fog horn was goin', an' them gals was out on a errand of mercy to get me to put it out of its misery.

"The next day I says to Henry: 'Henry! Tomorrow you an' me is goin' to take down that sign on the rud an' retire from the outdoor hotel business. That feller that said that women is uncertain coy an' hard to please was smarter than Solomon an' Dan'l put together.'" says, 'Come on Henry' to the man, an' off they go to their car.

Copyright.—WNU Service.

"I felt pretty low about the business for a while, an' then pretty soon another couple shows up.

"'We want a cottage by the shore,' says the woman, who was young an' kind of movin' pictur' lookin'.

"'Not too near the shore,' says the man.

"'As close as it can be. What's the use of coming to a place like this if we can't see the river?'

"'You won't be able to see the river for the fog in the morning, if you don't take that shack up on the hill.'

"'Very well. You can go there and I will take the cunning little one by the beach.'

"'Just as you say. But don't expect me to rescue you if a bear comes snooping around.'

"Then what does the girl do but bust out cryin' an' says the feller is a wuss brute than any bear, an' as soon as she can get to a railroad station she is goin' home to her mother. So she hops into the car, an' he climbs after her an' that's all of that.

"It was beginnin' to look as if the business wasn't goin' to go so well when along comes two old ladies chuggin' down the road an' one yells to us if we have a camp empty.

"When she finds we has five of 'em she an' her friend starts to look 'em over, an' by an' by we hear high words about the furnishin's.

"It seems one of 'em was sore because they wasn't no hooked rugs on the floor, an' the other wanted a fire place. They thrashed that out, by an' by decidin' to go back to the first cabin they'd looked at, an' there they got into a dispute about whether the cook stove would draw or not. After ten minutes they decided to find out by lightin' a fire into it. It drawed all right, but the old one claimed it only drawed because the wind was blowin' down river, an' would smoke like a volcano when the wind shifted.

"Then pretty soon, when they had moved to another cabin we could hear 'em arguin' over why they ever come here at all, an' one of 'em said the other should of come to the place that was recommended to 'em by her Cousin Alec, an' the other said that Cousin Alec was only about three-quarter witted, an' that his trouble seemed to run in the family.

"Then they both of 'em comes out of the house single file an' stalkin' right past us they gits into the car,

Maple Long Preferred by Furniture Craftsmen

"Through the centuries furniture craftsmen have appreciated maple and their loving hands have wrought such miracles of beautiful maple furniture that their historic consequence dwells with us today in our homes, where they enjoy enduring welcome," says the Educational Institute of the Furniture World.

"Particularly in the original American colonies, settled by our Pilgrim and Puritan forefathers, was this wood specially favored. Here in this humble beginning maple played a large part in the origin of the great colonial period in furniture design. During the Seventeenth century the Swedish influence in maple furniture design began to make itself felt.

"With crude tools, but great genius, skillful hands carved out of maple great furniture masterpieces that are today priceless treasures. Their splendid rugged character, fine and simple design, serve to emphasize the cheerful warmth of this historic wood.

"Present day designers hold maple in high reverence and respect the traditions of its background. And factories, too, busily engaged in the mass reproduction of maple furniture pieces, are faithful to the centuries-old legend of maple."

Why the Sudden Change to Liquid Laxatives?

Doctors have always recognized the value of the laxative whose dose can be measured, and whose action can be thus regulated to suit individual need.

The public, too, is fast returning to the use of liquid laxatives. People have learned that a properly prepared liquid laxative brings a more natural movement without any discomfort at the time, or after.

The dose of a liquid laxative can be varied to suit the needs of the individual. The action can thus be regulated. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The wrong cathartic may often do more harm than good.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a prescription, and is perfectly safe. Its laxative action is based on senna —a natural laxative. The bowels will not become dependent on this form of help. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is obtainable at all druggists.

Crocheted Rugs in Quilt Designs

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

During the past years patchwork quilts have been the big article of interest to the home needleworker and now we have the crocheted rug in quilt designs. The beauty of these rugs can only be appreciated after you have seen one of them. Crocheted rugs have the best wearing properties.

The rug above illustrated is the "Flower Garden" rug, which you will recognize as having received its name from the "Flower Garden" quilt. Size of rug is 30 inches and made from 2 lbs. of rag strips. Each block is made separately and when the seven are finished they are slip stitched together. The colors to be used depends upon the material you may have on hand or can dye to colors desired. Use contrasting colors for the different rows and the brighter the colors the more sunshine the rug brings to the home.

Our book No. 24 on crocheted rag rugs in quilt designs contains 20 rugs shown in colors with instructions. Write our rug Dept. and send 15c for this book. Address Home Craft Co., Dept. C, 19th & St. Louis Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

Guinea Pigs Adopt Young Marmot in the London Zoo

The latest bit of news from the London zoo concerns adoption of a young marmot by a colony of guinea pigs. One of the keepers of the zoo placed the marmot in the guinea pigs' pen after, for some unknown reason, it had been thrown out of its home burrow. The hungry outcast at once approached one of the mother guinea pigs which graciously allowed it to nurse.

The most curious thing about the incident was that thereafter when the baby marmot was hungry it did not always return to the same foster mother. Instead it appealed to any mother guinea pig that happened to be handy—and all of the guinea pigs thus approached proved equally accommodating.

Camping Out Started in Eighteenth Century

Camping, as an American practice, originated in the Eighteenth century for a different purpose than did the contemporary outdoor recreation, says the Tulsa World. In the early days "camp meetings" were religious festivals which all the neighborhood families attended. Then there were few churches and communities, so a certain spot would be appointed for services at a specified time of year. All the farmers from miles around would participate in the three or four days' services, and during this time the families would lodge near by in tents or shacks. Their purpose was to establish a temporary community.

In 1885 churches were well established in all organized communities and pioneering in the United States was virtually ended. People became weary of the city, especially the youths, so a New York business man conceived the idea of establishing a camp. From the first year of operation, which included six boys, to the present date, the total number in all camps has swelled to over 2,000,000. Older people became interested in this back-to-nature movement; now 10 per cent of all the population shares in this recreation.

TEXAS GETS OFF TO FLYING START IN AIDING FARMERS

By J. W. MARCHBANK

Texas is taking a leaf out of New York's book in the way of encouraging the breeding of a high type of light horse by devoting a portion of the income from the race track going to the state government to the purchase of thoroughbred stallions for distribution at strategic points in the great commonwealth. Up to this time fifteen stock horses have been placed in thirteen of the 264 counties of the state.

The magnitude of the undertaking in Texas is shown by the announcement of the official in charge that he plans to buy 250 more stallions from proceeds of race meetings of this fall and next spring. Some of the mares to be sent to the court of the Bureau horses will be of pure blood, but most of the flock will be cold blooded. The Remount Service found out long ago that the best of general utility animals come from an infusion of thoroughbred blood.

Is California going to be asleep at the switch much longer? Isn't it time for action in establishing a Breeding Bureau, an integral part of which is a band of well bred stallions placed in agricultural and cattle districts up nd down the state?

The state of Texas has already expended $62,777 in its wonderful work, and it can easily be figured what an enormous amount will be turned over to thoroughbred owners when the additional 250 stallions are purchased.

Interest in racing is at a high pitch in the cities of California and that is fine. The backbone of the whole sporting body, however, is in farming, and everything possible must be done to arouse enthusiasm among the producers. If the people of the interior get busy in building up breeding, both thoroughbred and half-bred, the sport has a chance of eclipsing what are known as the days of glory some years back.

Harbingers Of Progress

The Mining Review, in a highly jubilant editorial, reports that throughout the entire western mining area the industry is improving.

Section by section, metal mining activity is getting under way. Themovement is being led, naturally, by the renewed interest in gold mining, resulting from the increase in its value, and all other metals are coming in for a share of the better times.

Here's hoping that the mines will once more take their proper place in the economic sun as employers, taxpayers and harbingers of progress.

THOROUGHBREDS WILL SOON RACE IN BAY MEADOWS

Construction Work On New Track To Be Completed For Fall Session

With slightly more than two weeks left before the opening, on November 3, the new Bay Meadows race course is humming with activity. Every morning finds horses galloping around the mile oval, while at the grand stand and club house workers are busily engaged in adding the finishing touches.

Special express cars loaded with thoroughbreds are arriving each day from the East and western horses being brought in from the various breeding and training farms throughout California, the 1000 stalls at the track are rapidly being exhausted.

Following the close of tracks at Chicago and Detroit last week, there has been a steady arrival of shipments from the two courses, including some of the top-notch handicap horses of the country. Although the eastern invasion is one of the largest and best ever to cross the Rockies, the easterners will find a strong array of western horses at Bay Meadows ready to give them a battle for every purse.

Meanwhile construction work on the beautiful new San Mateo course is entering its final stages. The track is ready for racing and the grand stand and club house are virtually completed, lacking only in finishing touches, such as railings and paint.

Landscaping already is beginning to add a touch of beauty to the plant. The infield, which has been sown with turf, is rapidly becoming a broad green carpet broken only by the gleaming expanse of an artificial lake containing a million and a half gallons of water.

To handle traffic, four roads are being built, two connecting the track with El Camino Real and two with the Bay Shore Highway. A parking space to accommodate 6.500 cars has ben finished. There will be no charge for parking.

A public inspection of the plant and demonstration of the totalisator is being planned for Sunday, October 28, six days before the opening. The huge odds board for the mechanical device that will automatically register and total all wagers, is finished and the "tote" is expected to be in working order in two weeks.

About Back-Firing

Back-firing of the motor usually is due to lack of sufficient fuel to produce the proper proportion of vapor in the combustion chamber, according to the emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association.

WHITE SLIP STAMPED BY ASSESSOR NEEDED FOR CAR REGISTER

Unless a motorist's white slip certificate of car registration is stamped on the reverse side by the assessor he cannot get his new license plates for 1935. Despite recent warnings to this effect, large numbers of automobile owners have not yet complied with the new law, according to a statement by the California State Automobile Association urging motorists not to overlook the requirement.

The new law which went into effect last March makes it impossible to renew registration or transfer ownership of a car until personal property tax payment has been cleared by the assessor and the registration certificate stamper as evidence.

The Division of Registration, Department of Motor Vehicles, recently called attention to apparently widespread failure to have certificates stamped. This condition is being made evident, it was stated, by the fact that an average of half of the hundreds of transfer applications received daily are accompanied by certifivates which do not bear the assessor's stamp.

In some counties certificates were stamped by the assessor at the time the car owner declared his personal property tax as a lien on his real estate; in other counties assessors deferred this action. The general policy in all counties now, however, is that any car owner who has made his personal property tax a real estate lien may come in and have his certificate stamped.

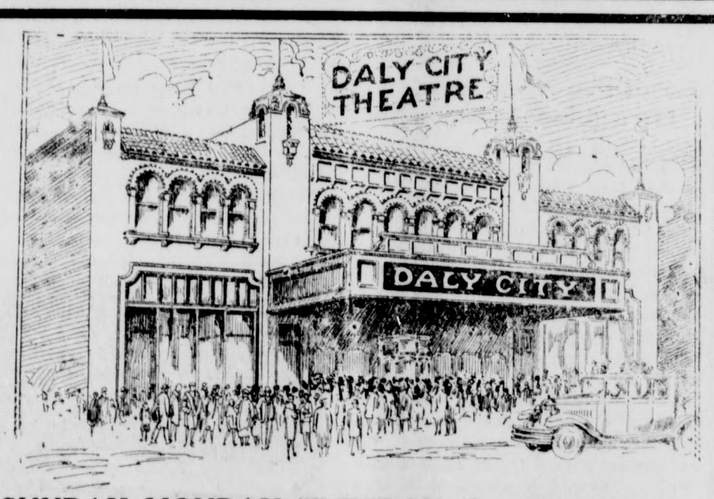

In any event, it is pointed out, the car owner should not fail to present his white slip for stamping when he pays the first installment on his tax bill, due throughout the state November 1.

Those whose personal property tax is not secured by real estate are subject to a ten per cent penalty for nonpayment of that tax after December 1.

"The new law, designed to block tax dodging, is having its first test," the Automobile Association statement comments. "This organization is watching operation of the law to see whether its benefits justify the inconvenience it imposes upon the motoring public."

Cause Misfiring

There are several conditions which may cause the engine to misfire under load, or at idling speed, according to the emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association. The most common causes are improperly adjusted timing, poor compression, fouled or cracked spark plugs, ignition leaks due to poor connections, leaking manifold gasket, sediment or water in fuel line, leaking cylinder head gasket, weak or shorted coil, foreign particles in distributor.

SOME QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Some Little Known Matters That Should Prove of General Interest

(By Maude Larue Ives)

Question: What is a dulcimer?

Answer: A very ancient musical instrument, which is quite a curiosity today, and of much interest because it was the forerunner of the piano. It was a flat box with a sounding board over which metal wires were strung. On one side were pegs which held the wires in place and by tightening them the instrument was tuned; it was played by striking the wires with two cork headed mallets. The Crusaders were supposed to have introduced the dulcimer into Europe from the East.

Question: What was the Dred Scott Decision?

Answer: The conclusion of a noted case bearing on slavery, argued in 1855 and 1856 in the United States Supreme Court. The decision, announced on March 6, 1857, by Chief Justice Taney, was of vital importance because of its influence upon the spread of slavery. Dred Scott, the plaintiff, was the slave of an army officer in Missouri. His owner took him to the free state of Illinois and then to Minnesota, where, by the Missouri Compromise, slavery was forbidden. In 1838 he was taken back to Missouri, a slave state. Scott subsequently learned that by previous decisions of the Missouri courts his residence in a free state made him a free man, and he sued for his freedom in 1848, the local court of Saint Louis County giving a verdict in his favor. The state Supreme Court reversed the decision of the lower court and this decision was upheld by the United States Supreme Court, which declared that a slave was merely a chattel and a citizen had a right to take his property wherever he chose, provided it was within the jurisdiction of the United States. The court also decided that no negro could be a citizen of the United States, and, therefore, would have no rights in a court of law. By this decision, slavery was practically admitted to every state and territory of the Union, and it increased the tense feeling between the sections and proved one of the important factors which led to the War of Secession.

Question: What is the most westerly city of the Great Lakes territory?

Answer: Duluth, Minn.

Question: What is the leading auto manufacturing province of Canada?

Answer: Ontario.

Question: What is an attache?

Answer: A subordinate official attached to an embassy. The duties of such an office are specific. A military attache observes military affairs; a naval attache, naval business.

Installing Battery

It is possible to install the batery incorrectly. One way of checking is to turn the lights on after the battery has been installed, according to the emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association. If the ammeter shows "discharge" with lights on, the battery is in correctly. If ammeter shows "charge" with lights on, the battery should be reversed immediately. This test should be made with ignition switch "off."

(a) Business failures lower than for years; (b) Deposits in Savings Banks, June 30, 1934, $19,788,000,000; (c) Deposits in National Banks, June, 30, 1934, $24,774,368,000; (d) Deposits in state banks, June 30, 1934, $8,635,799,000; (e) Sales of farm products for 1933 and 1934, including benefits, are: 1934, estimated, $5,950,000,000; 1933, $5,027,000,000; Increase $923,000,000, or nearly 20 per cent (in spite of the budget).

(f) Federal Emergefcy Expenditures: For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1934, $4,283,315,470; for the first two months of the current fiscal year, $584,000,000.

(g) There is a huge loan capacity indicated as follows: Loans and investments of member banks in the Federal Reserve System, August 1929, about $36,000,000,000; at the end of June, 1934, about $27,000,000,000; a decrease of about $9,000,000,000.

Loans and investments of non-member banks: June 30, 1929, $22,000,000,000; June 30, 1934, $15,200,000,000; a decrease of $6,800,000,000.

Thus a large volume of credit is available in the way of bank loans, through the approval by bafks, of going business projects, or for such individual purposes as home modernization and automobile purchases.

Now look at certain reserves: (a) The Federal Reserve Board estimates there is in hoarding a billion dollars; (b) National Banks have authority under existing legislation to issue $600,000,000 in national bank notes; (c) According to the August number of the Federal Reserve Bulletin, member bank reserve balances (latter part of July) amounted to $4,000,000,000, the largest figure hiterto recorded. This is $1,900,000,000 in excess of legal requirements.

Tabulating the last three items, we have: Excess reserves of Federal member banks in excess of legal requirements. $1,900,000,000; authorized national bank notes, $600,000,000; money in hoarding, $1,000,000,000; total $3,500,000,000.

If we care to accept a commonly expressed principle that one dollar of reserves furnishes the basis for ten dollars in credit, we may see in these three items a possible total credit expansion of $35,000,000,000.

From this possible expansion we should consider three possibilities: (a) The situation may remain static, which would make for stagnant business conditions: (b) Credit expansion might flow too freely into speculation, which conceivably might be overdone; (c) Because of depleted stocks, accumulated individual and business needs, having in mind a huge reserve national purchasing power, a well sustained and reasonably increasing purchasing program is highly possible.

Of the three possibilities can there be any doubt as to which is the most desirable?

In this statement no attempt is made to compile or analyze national resources or to forecast business conditions. Attention is simply called to important items that indicate a very large reserve buying power.

We venture the assertion that a composed public mind and a universal feeling of confidence is highly essential to bring about a large expansion of trade. The figures indicated should serve to enhance confidence, and remove distrust of the nation's ability to cope with its economic problems.

The situation is an interesting challenge to business leaders and to salesmen.

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WEEK

$10,000,000 Wage Boost: Four leading packing companies—Swift, Armour, Cudahy and Wilson—have announced an 8 per cent increase in hourly wages, effective October 1. More than 100,000 workers will be affected by this action, which is expected to expand their purchasing power by about $10,000,000 a year. This marks a 36 per cent rise in wages since the advent of NRA, according to company officials. The John Morrell Co. of Topeka and the Rath Packing Co. of Waterloo have announced a similar increase.

11,504 New Workers: By July 16 last, the can manufacturing industry had added 11,504 new workers to its payrolls. Under its code, the average work week has been reduced to 39.4 hours from 46. Average hourly rates of pay have been increased by 17.6 per cent and the total annual payroll by $12,000,000. While the labor provisions permit the employment of 20 per cent of the total wage earners at the minimum hourly rate, only 3.9 per cent of the workers are now receiving the minimum.

A Tribute To The President: The men's clothing industry celebrated its first NRA anniversary this month and the Code Authority sent the following telegram to the President: "Under the code, employment in our industry has increased and wage rates have increased. We are happy that our industry has been able to make this definite contribution toward industrial recovery power and we take the liberty of expressing our appreciation of your great leadership in the industrial recovery program.

Small Paper Mills Helped: The small paper mills of the country have benefited by NRA, according to a survey conducted by the Paper Mill, a journal devoted to the pulp and paper industry. "All paper manufacturers whose mills have a capacity of 25 tons or less daily," the Paper Mill reports, "were requested to express their opinion of the advantages and disadvantages of operating under NRA and Code Administrative Authorities. The result of this survey reveals that the small mills by more than two to one are in favor of NRA and approve of the progress made thus far under the Pulp and Paper Codes."

"Little Fellows" Make Profits: In spite of higher costs occasioned by labor provisions, 1933 profits in the retail hardware trade were generally the largest since 1930, Dun and Bradstreet's report. Small concerns, whose net sales averaged $2,500 to $5,000 for the year, showed the largest gains—a net profit of 20 per cent. The smallest net profit—3.3 per cent was set down for the stores having net sales for the year of $500,000 to $1,000,000.

Dry Goods Executive Lauds NRA: Edwin R. Dibrell, vice president of the Associated Dry Goods Corporation, told members of the N. Y. Times Advertising Club that "NRA has brought about the realization of ideals held by business leaders for many years but heretofore impossible of attainment. Obviously, codes have not been thrust upon industry by the administration, but have been formulated by business men themselves."

Blue Eagle Posters Liked: Within the last week, local NRA committees in 725 cities have written in for Blue Eagle Posters to be distributed to business establishments in their communities which possess the Blue Eagle of their codes. Business men are making wise use of this attractive three color poster designed by Charles Coiner, who sketched the original Blue Eagle.

Two Million Consumer Emblems Requested: Highlights of two weeks ago stated that there is available a 1934 Consumer's Emblem of cooperation with Blue Eagle employers. Two million have been requested from various cities and individuals.

MANY HOMES ARE SAVED FOR THEIR OWNERS BY HOLC

More than a half million urban homes in the United States have been saved from foreclosure by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation in its first full year since the opening of its last state office, by the granting of mortgage refunding loans amounting to over a billion and a half of dollars, it is announced by the corporation.

As of September 7, the corporation has closed 505,070 mortgage loans throughout the country for a total of $1,513,100,612, of which about $150,000,000 was distributed in cash in local communities.

To liquidate arrears of taxes and assessments on homes securing loans, the corporation has paid approximately $103,300,000 into local treasuries in the 3072 counties of the United States. These sums have reduced tax delinquencies, permitting countless communities to meet their payrolls and other obligations.

Where advisable the corporation allows a sum for reconditioning, repairing and remodeling it is estimated that $20,274,000 has been so expended, providing employment for thousands of men in the building trades and the factories.

Some $200,000,000 of the loans closed represent mortgages taken over from closed and restricted banks and other financial institutions, thus allowing large payments to depositors and in many cases to reopen.

"Millions of persons have been benefited by the vast refunding operations of the corporation," a statement of the corporation points out, "besides the borrowers. Delinquent mortgages, involving tax arrearages and suspension of payments, have exchanged for guaranteed government bonds. Home financing institutions have been enabled gradually toresume their normal functions. Distressed properties have been removed from the market. Owners of mortgages and real estate equities have a firmer foundation under their investments. The mounting rate of home foreclosures is arrested. Real estate prices are being stabilized to the advantage of all elements of the American people."

WON WHEN HE LOST

Just as Styles Scott hooked a two pound trout, near Sarasota, Fla., a pelican swooped down and swallowed the fish. The ansgler succeeded in landing both the fish and the pelican.

OLD HISTORICAL DATA OF THE COLMA VALLEY

Incidents of Pioneer Days and Characters Recalled For Our Readers

(By An Old-Timer)

On to Thornton Beach via the School street extension project that Supervisor "Good Roads" Jim Casey spent $85,000 of the people's money on, only to have the work abandoned as soon as his successor gained control.

It looks now as though we will be on our way to Thornton Beach via the School street way, as Supervisor Al Witt is interesting himself in the needed improvement and promises never to rest until the boulevard is completed.

There is another argument, not heretofore mentioned, that will make the School street route the main leading highway to the Skyline Boulevard, that will practically eliminate the necessity of improving the present dangerous curves and narrow roadway of the only road leading from Daly City and Colma to the Skyline. To improve that stretch of road properly would cost much more than would the School street road, built on a straight line between the Junipero Serra boulevard and the Skyline, and the actual distance from any part of Colma would not be increased and, besides, the School street grade would be practically perfect, compared with the present crooked road, no matter what amount of money might be expended. It does not take an experienced civil engineer to see this, as it can be seen by anyone at a glance.

It is the duty of every loyal citizen to get behind Supervisor Witt in this laudable work, not only of the citizenry of the North End, but of the entire county of San Mateo, because the improvement of Thornton Beach would result in millions of dollars of benefit to our county. The Palisades and Marine View home sites would just naturally follow in the wake of the progressive spirit that makes possible the easy access to the safest and best bathing beach in the San Francisco area and the marvelous scenic Mussel Rock. Right now is the time for action, to be ready for the 1937 Bridge Completion Exposition that is sure to be at Laguna de la Merced.

What a glorious tribute to those hardy settlers of the Colma Valley between 1853 and 1860, as mentioned in our two previous historical recordings in these columns of the Daly City Record, in addition to the most thriving suburban city of San Francisco.

Now is the time for action, when real action will count millions for San Mateo County. The Board of Supervisors and county engineer should not lose a minute in pushing forward this most important undertaking in San Mateo County at the present time, because it is an outstanding necessity now, more than it was twenty-five years ago when "Good Roads" Jim Casey first conceived the worthy project.

There was a splendid San Francisco Labor Day parade in September, 1909, in which the Colma Record participated in the San Francisco Typographical Union section with a Chalmers Detroit "30" that was magnificently decorated with Colma flowers. Besides the chauffeur, the occupants of the open car were Editor J. L. Brown and Mr. and Mrs. William C. Silver. The car was highly complimented by many, including the late George A. Tracy, president of the Typographical Union, who suggested that we have the car photographed, which was done in front of the Mission Dolores, and a halftone of same was printed in the Record of September 11, 1909.

Mickey Griffin, the village "cutup," has gone for a trip to Indiana and has left his "goats" to rejoice his absence. Colma will be a silent "burg" until the "Irish Patriot" returns.

Dick English, the young Irishman with a British name, returned from his honeymoon trip, declaring: "Thar's nothin' loike marrit loife and Oi nivir knew phat love was until the right little gal came aloong and made goo-goo eyes at me."

Colonel Walsh has intoxicated ideas that he discovere dthe North Pole and says he will bring it to Colma and put it up in front of the White House saloon, where the colonel is one of the barkeeps.

George Pappas, on the hill, when it comes to being a great eater, is in a class by himself. He awoke at noon one day, ate fifteen meals and was still hungry and thirsty when he went to bed at ten.

F. L. E. A. Tham, the Hillcrest barber, always made his customers scratch.

There is a picture in the Record of a White steamer that is advertised to use kerosene for fuel.

Sway On Curves

When the car sways or rolls excessively on curves, have shock absorbers checked for adjustment and correct amount of fluid, suggests the emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association.

Underinflated tires or weak springs also contribute to car sway or roll.

SYNOPSIS

On her way to a faculty position in Lostland Academy, Janet Mercer meets Prof. Arthur Fleming, also on his way to the Academy. At the school they are struck by an air of mystery pervading the place. Gordon Haskell, proprietor, welcomes them. Wilton Payne completes the Academy faculty. In a schoolroom Janet finds a group which the teachers had supposed were scholars, are wax figures. Haskell explains unusual circumstances connected with the conduct of the Academy. Among the pupils is Berenice Bracebridge, daughter of the late owner of the school. The story of the tragedy of Lostland Academy is that of two sisters and two brothers of Berenice, who lost their lives in the water, some years ago. The wax figures were modeled in the likenesses of the four, and Doctor Bracebridge's will provided that they must be preserved. Payne learns from Berenice that an uncouth giant whom Janet had seen with Haskell is named Balder, and is a valuable servant. From Jerry Moore, the only witness of the drowning of the children, Payne learns particulars of the tragedy. He begins to take an increasing interest in Berenice, as Fleming does in Janet. Reading diaries kept by Doctor Bracebridge, Payne senses something sinister in the drowning of the children. In the belfry of the old church he finds a long discarded Christmas tree. Its presence puzzles him. Balder makes a halting explanation of its preservation. Haskell proposes marriage to Berenice, but she tells him she does not love him enough to marry him. Payne ascertains the fact that the feeling of something sinister about the Academy is general in the community.

"Strong men like Balder are in demand," Payne commented; "mere muscular strength is valuable in a vast place like the academy." He slipped the key into her hand. "I had this made for you, though I know you are getting the better of your fears."

Her hand closed over the little key gratefully. "I am much better—much happier. It's only when I am listening to Mother Martha that I think of the figures. Even my guardian doesn't speak of them now, and I think he does not go near them."

"No, he doesn't."

"And the scholars seem less afraid. They are getting used to the old place."

"It has become very dear to me," he whispered.

"I wish I hadn't heard that report about my guardian and myself."

"Forget it!"

"Balder is always doing what he shouldn't do—but not what he should. I don't suppose he even burned the old tree."

"I think he did. It was there the first time I went back to the belfry; the next it was gone!"

"I'm glad! It made me lonesome thinking of that dreary little tree up there. I believe I'll wear this key around my neck—under my dress. Be sure you remember to put the original back."

When they returned home they found Balder burning leaves on the other side of the garden from the pine grove.

"Don't speak to him about talking of your engagement, Berenice," Janet cautioned her. "Don't get his ill will."

Berenice promised to say nothing. Wilton, when he had put the car away, proposed a walk around the lake, "—if you are not tired with all the excitement of the day."

She glanced back several times at the figure of Balder seen across the smoke and flame of the burning leaves.

"He's watching us. He pretends he isn't watching us, but he is—as he tosses the leaves, he's watching!"

"What of it? He cannot harm us."

"I'm not so sure. He has a queer sort of fidelity to my guardian. He may resent—"

She broke off, blushing. She had come too near to uttering a secret hope. Wilton, looking tenderly at her, saw in the signals of that rising color a prophecy of his own ultimate happiness—the fulfillment of his dearest wish!

They stood where a little beach of crisp white sand received the low murmur and caress of the lake at its endless lapping and stirring; a wood, a tangle of small birches and maples, stretched back from the banks and invited them to enter. A little, smooth path of white sand serpentined through the wood, its edges fern bordered; this they took until the fairy birches received them into their company, and ringed them from observation. The girl paused then with a sigh of relief, took off her knitted cap, and let her hair blow in the wind.

"Your hair is as yellow as the birch leaves. You are not afraid now."

"No!"

"Berenice, I never meant to tell you so soon—but, my dear—"

He paused, unable to meet her eyes or to utter the wild words of worship and adoration he had so often rehearsed in the lonely watches of the night—now they had fled from him as dreams flee. What was real was his stammering, his inability to tell her that she had become his inclosed world of glory and enchantment.

"Wilton—it isn't too soon. Here everything has to come quickly."

"For the danger—the fear!"

The spirit of her eyes was one of intense demand and challenge—as if she sought the refuge of his arms for more than the bright validities of love.

"To know you love me keeps the darkness back—keeps back what I most fear—what creeps up to me from all those sad, empty rooms and corridors." She pointed through the trees, across the blue, moving waters at the ivied building. "I am glad, Wilton—"

"I could not help it."

"As if I wanted you to! We shall be married—soon."

"We must keep our engagement secret."

"But not from Janet and Arthur and kind Mrs. Denver."

"No—they're safe."

"I would have to tell Janet." She started as the whirr of a partridge shook all the bushes near them. "I feel nowhere safe from harm."

"What harm could come to you?"

"I don't know! I think too much."

"Yes—and you've had rather a strange girlhood."

She looked about her. "I'm glad you asked me to marry you here—out of doors. I shall never forget it. Here a little wintergreen plant close to my feet; a laurel bush behind us, a birch tree over us!"

He drew her into his arms, held her close—then a voice startled them apart. "Miss Berenice!" They turned. It was Balder, glowering at them evilly. "Your gardeen wants you," he said, and threw Wilton an insolent and threatening look.

"Miss Bracebridge will come when she is ready. Please go back where you came from."

Balder drew himself to his full height. He was a terrifying spectacle as he shot an arm into the air with the curious precision of a machine.

"Don't get near my arm," he muttered. "I warn you to keep away."

"Leave us!"

"You think you can have it all your own way in Lostland academy. You're not the boss."

"Go! I tell you."

Balder turned away muttering "You'll be sorry."

Berenice addressed Wilton with passionate earnestness. "Oh, I am so sorry you spoke to him at all, Wilton—he is so sullen, so revengeful. I am always afraid of him. I hate to go back. He'll go straight to Gordon Haskell—and what will happen to us then?"

"Nothing can happen to us, darling. Haven't we the right to love each other?"

"Yes—but suppose he separates us?"

"He can't. I'll take you away first. Marry you at once."

"If I marry under twenty-one I must have his consent."

They stood in silence, the chill breath

It Was Balder, Glowering at Them Evilly.

of actuality turning their vernal hopes to December bleakness.

"You are free of him absolutely—at twenty-one."

"Yes! free! I hope. He has always liked me better than I like him."

"Give me your promise, dear, to wait for me—through everything."

"What else should I wait for?"

"You haven't met many men, dear."

"No—but I—know that I could not change." She spoke without emotion, as quietly and with as much conviction as she would have affirmed that they were standing near a lake.

"Berenice, I think I shall go straight to your guardian and tell him. What can he do! He can't turn back the clock!"

"Do you think it's best? I'm not sure of him. I've been under the same roof with him for years, and I do not know him well yet. He has strange moods—solitary rages, biting ways of cutting people short. His personality helped in the decay of the academy; Oh, I am talking most freely, but it is a relief!"

"Of course it is. You are only telling me things I've figured out largely for myself. Janet and Arthur see it, too."

"You see, if he should be angry and tell you to go—what would become of me?"

"Don't worry! My darling, I'd be standing within call like these everlasting pines. I can camp in the deserted village—anywhere! Or go to Jerry Moore. He'd lodge me for a while, I'm sure."

"Don't let us tell him," she pleaded.

"But Balder will."

"Then let us go together."

Flying Horse on Sign

The Flying Horse in Shanghai, China, is declared to be one of the most wonderful electric signs in the world.

California
News of the Week

That California's "unusual weather" may be caused by shifts in the Japanese current is the belief of Scripps Oceanography Institute at La Jolla. The assertion is based on studies of ocean depths made by Roger Revelle who recently took observations of the ocean floor from Alaska to Honolulu. It is expected the study will aid rainfall prediction and fisheries production.

Effectiveness of Roosevelt's housing program is shown by the increase in building permits in many California cities. Cities conducting renovizing campaigns showed the most active advances. Those showing heaviest gains over last year include Palo Alto, Riverside, Fresno, Salinas, Santa Barbara, Santa Monica, and San Bernardino.

Archaeologist Paul Walker is piecing together the history of the Indian tribes which inhabited the San Jose region 35 centuries ago. Already two of the four prehistoric villages in the district have been discovered, one of them covering an acre of ground and containing cooking stones, bones, sea shells, arrow points, and marble and iridescent beads which must have taken a generation to make.

"Erosion control" is a phrase coming into wide use in southern California. The most common method is setting stakes twelve inches in the ground two or three feet apart in terraces along slides that have occurred naturally or by highway construction. These stakes hold the soil until natural vegetation gets a start. Then a few of the 27 different varieties of seeds used in this work are planted to hold the soil together.

Public Works Administrator Earl Lee Kelly has made a prophesy. He predicts a road, stretching from New York to California permitting autos to drive 100 miles an hour. The road is already under consideration, the director stated, the plan proposing "an elevated overpass over busy streets in congested areas, similar to the overpass approach proposed for the Oakland approach to the bay bridge."

California Peace Officers' association, which has just finished its Pasadena convention, favors fingerprinting all auto drivers, favors requiring all sales and transfers of firearms to be registered, and believes a merger of local law bodies into a state police department would decrease crime. Marysville was selected as next year's convention locale.

This state is to become the home of good horseflesh. Two first class racetracks, one at Santa Anita, near Los Angeles, and the other at Bay Meadows, by San Francisco, are nearly finished. A three-eighths of a mile straightaway will make records possible at the Santa Anita track. Thoroughbreds are already being shipped to Bay Meadows for the opening, November 3.

Dr. Leo L. Stanley, San Quentin prison physician, is working on a new method of immunization which is claimed to be better than vaccination. Live germs are placed in a small clay capsule, the capsule being put in the blood stream. Porosity of the clay allows germ toxins to seep through, the germs remaining enclosed. Advantages of the method, which is still in the experimental stage, are no scars and no sick reaction as in vaccination.

The year's work of 300 men was done in one second when fifty tons of dynamite were touched off at Catalina island. A 1000-foot mountain, loosened by the blast, slid to the water's edge where barges will be loaded with its rock and towed to the mainland. The rock will be used to construct the Long Beach-San Pedro breakwater.

One of the world's outstanding engineering feats is being completed and will be ready for operation October 28. Covering 20 years of work and costing $100,000,000, the Hetch-Hetchy will make secure the San Francisco bay region water supply. The 168 mile aqueduct includes 64 miles of tunnels, one tunnel being 25 miles long.

Business in the state's eight largest cities is averaging about 12 per cent more than a year ago, bank figures reveal. Check payments for the first week in October totaled 392 million compared with 350 million last year. Sacramento is away out ahead in gains, money moving 193 per cent faster than in 1933.

State Statistician Mrs. Marie B. Stringer has done quite a little figuring on this quintuplet business. On the basis of the present population, she declares, the average time elapsing between such births in this state would be 990 years. In other words, one out of every 24,000,000 births would be quintuplets.

After being released from serving the rest of his jail sentence because of good behavior, Al Reynolds requested that he be allowed to remain a few days longer to instruct the man who was to take his place. Santa Barbara's Sheriff James Ross hates to lose this trustee who has broken every kind of a good behavior record, one of them being to keep the fleet of swift police cars in perfect repair. Reynolds has been called the "most efficient prisoner."

TRUE DETECTIVE STORY
by Vance Wynn © Public Ledger

The Man Who Hit the Bull's Eye

MOONSHINING flourished long before the prohibition amendment was made to the Constitution of the United States.

Twenty years ago it was carried on in the mountains of West Virginia on a scale that made the government authorities gasp for breath.

The general impression of the moonshiner is that of a poor white man who is willing to take big chances in order to make a little illegal money.

This is true of some sections, but at the time mentioned there were bold and unscrupulous distillers who carried it on as a business in a big way and who made fortunes by the operation.

Wayne Gooch was one of these men.

He was called "the King of the Moonshiners," and there is no reason to doubt that he was entitled to the distinction.

The scandals grew to such proportions that the commissioner of internal revenue at Washington determined it would have to be stopped at all hazards.

The man he assigned to the job was a fearless agent named Tom Kennedy.

He had several advantages. One was that he knew the mountains of West Virginia.

Another was that he was a crack shot.

These things were important, because the moonshiners placed small value on human life.

Most of them boasted that they would not be taken alive, and by the same token they would kill anyone who attempted to interfere with their business.

Kennedy determined to confront the lion in his den.

He made up his mind to go to the Gooch stamping grounds in the guise of a government forester.

Merely to be known as a person who was connected with the government in any capacity was taking a big chance, but Kennedy was a man who had been taking chances all his life, and one additional chance meant litttle to him.

He had two capable assistants with him, and he went direct to the cabin where the king of the moonshiners made his headquarters.

He introduced himself by his real name, and he wanted to know what the authorities could do to help the cultivation of trees in that part of the country. Gooch, who was a big, bluff fellow, received him cordially enough, even though he kept his weather eye on this curious stranger.

He said the soil in that part of West Virginia was not particularly adapted to forestry, but he cheerfully offered to escort Kennedy about the country.

It was just what the revenue agent wanted.

He kept his eyes and his ears open, and at the end of 24 hours was forced to confess that there was not even the sign of a still in operation.

During that time the king entertained the agent in a royal fashion.

One day they had a shooting match, with a big target set up near the cabin. Kennedy participated, and to the great delight and admiration of the king the visitor hit the bull's eye nine times out of ten.

Gooch said that was the best record ever made in that locality.

He parted with his guest with apparent reluctance.

Kennedy had played his cards so well that he was not even suspected by the king of the moonshiners.

They parted one night with expressions of mutual esteem. Kennedy had no misconception of his man.

He knew that if his true character had become known he would have been shot down like a dog.

This thought keyed him up to the game he was about to play.

He left the cabin and the vicinity, but he had proof that distilling was going on on a great scale.

He discovered that the stuff was sent to the depot in a truck at about midnight each night.

So he lay in wait with his two men and when the team arrived at a certain part of the road he appeared in the highway with a loaded and primed revolver.

The driver and his assistant, taken unawares, surrendered.

In the meantime, Kennedy sent for re-enforcements and before another day had gone by the king of the moonshiners and his men had been taken into custody

Counterfeit Wampum

Counterfeit wampum came into being with the white man's arrival in America when a family of European immigrants of Paskack, N. J., with the aid of steel drills and lathes, became proficient in making wampum from the cheap, plentiful shells of the common Busycon conch of the Gulf coast. This counterfeit Indian money circulated as far west as the Mississippi valley.

Hawaii's Temperature

Hawaii, lying in mid-ocean just within the tropics, has a warm climate throughout the year, though high temperatures are prohibited by the northeast trade winds, which blow for about nine months of the year. The mean annual temperature is 71.5 degrees. The extremes are 54 degrees and 89 degrees.

Psychologist Declares Flapper's Dizzy Days Over

Farewell to the flapper. Her dizzy days are over. Comely she was, and full of pep. But she knew little or nothing about brakes, and she has skidded out of sight, according to Dr. Ernest L. Talbert, psychologist at the University of Cincinnati. In fact, the little miss is so far outmoded that one might almost expect a return of the staid days when the McGuffey readers were the standard literature of the family, says the Literary Digest.

Doctor Talbert based his studies on the character of magazines over the years since the flapper walked on the stage and took her last cue. "Several recent studies of American life from 1890 on show startling changes," he reported to a discussion group at Cincinnati. "A statistical investigation of articles printed in periodicals reveals a preoccupation with the changing conditions surrounding the family, with divorce, birth control, and sex morals. Approval of more modern habits show an upward curve from 1922 to 1929.

"Since then comes a drop. A more conservative tone appears. The reign of the flapper is over. Periodicals of wide circulation are more conventional and severe in their professed code than the intellectual organs and women's magazines."

Villages Buried by Sand on Lake Michigan Shore

Giant sand dunes that travel by day and night have overcome and almost obliterated a number of small towns that once dotted the eastern shore of Lake Michigan. At Grand Haven, a few rotting piles are all that is left of the once extensive warehouses, docks and trestles of a railway and steamer terminal. Happy Hollow, the village in a small valley high in the hills back of a terminal where the workers lived, was abandoned half a century ago. Twenty years ago some of the roofs still could be seen, but they are gone now. Mills, camps and docks have disappeared along with villages.

Venice Garage Biggest

At the Venice end of the new bridge connecting the Italian city to the mainland has been erected the largest garage in Europe. It has a capacity of 2,000 cars. There is no room for automobiles to park in Venice, hence the size of the storage place.

The Northern California Mines Company has recently completed a new suspension bridge across the Trinity River just below Junction City to cary a 34-inch water line and a 28-inch line to its hydraulic pits. W. C. Van Antwerp, 156 Montgomery Street, San Francisco, is president of the company, and Bert Gilzean of Junction City is in Charge of oper-ations. The two pipes carry water at different pressures for working gravel terraces at two different ele-vations. The high-pressure line, for which water is purchased, will be used to operate in a pit about 100 feet higher in elevation than the pit near river-level, which will be supplied by the second line of pipe. A water right for this line is owned by the mining company. The company con-trols a strip of land along the river about two miles long and three-quar-ters of a mile wide, formerly known as the Red Hills Mine and the Jacobs estate.

After lying idle twenty years fol-lowing an output exceeding $8,000,-000. the distoric National Gold Mine is about to resume production. Re-opened last year by Frank Stall, Sac-ramento mining man, and associates of Los Angeles and New York, the property has been developed sufficiently to disclose wide faces of ex-cellent ore in the X vein, with a winze from the 400 level going down on a fairly rich showing. The mill has been practically rebuilt and is sched-uled to go into commission within three weeks. It will handle from fifty to seventy-five tons per day, with amalgamation, concentration and flotation used. About fifteen miners are employed, with this force to be increased when milling starts.

will profit to the extent of a consid-erable portion of the total cost of the new schools through the outright grant of 30 per cent from the govern-ment. Also, the interest to be paid on the $80,000 bond issue (4 per cent) will be the lowest paid for any simi-lar bonds in California, if not in the entire nation. Thus, we can save a tidy sum, which can be applied on the cost of the buildings, by passage of the bonds and acceptance of the government proposal at this time.

The suggestion was made that a truck be used to parade the streets the day before election day to remind the voters of the date ,and that there be bell ringing to attract attention to this advertising truck. It is also possible that some members of our Municipal Band will be stationed on the vehicle, who will provide excel-lent music while it is traversing the highways and byways on its worthy mission.

A call has been issued for autos to take voters to the polls on election day, Friday, November 2. Request is made that any one wishing to donate a car on that day, telephone the presi-dent of any Parent Teacher Unit or to R. L. Crane, superintendent of schools of the Jefferson School Dis-trict, Randolph 6479, or to the Editor of The Record, Randolph 3215.

Following are the boundaries of the voting precincts for this election:

Precinct No. 1 includes all that ter-ritory within the Jefferson School District on the easterly side of Mis-sion street in Daly City.

Precinct No. 2 includes all terri-tory on the westerly side of Mission treet in Daly City.

Precinct No. 3 includes all territory in the district not included in Pre-cincts Nos. 1 and 2.

men are employed at the property blocking out gravel deposits and driv-ing an auxiliary shaft for ventilation and emergency exit, as required by law. A 120-horsepower Diesel engine with electric generator is the object-ive of the company as soon as the new mill is erected. Power now is generated by a Pelton wheel Lyman Gilmore is general manager of the property.

Mayor G. M. Steele and associates of Lodi, are making plans to begin operating the old Lady Bedford Mine in Amador County. This mine was discovered in the early 60s, and was mined to a depth of 280 feet. It is said that much of the ore taken from the mine in those early days ranged from $50 to $100 a ton. Samples taken recently from fifty feet of the exposed vein in one of the lower stopes assayed an everage value of $22.40 a ton. The Lady Bedford is adjacent and just north of the Am-ador Star Mine and immediately west of the old Bay State.

Another mine will be added this month to Nevada's list of gold pro-ducers when the mill of the Lahontan Mines Company is placed in operation at Ramsay, thirty miles east of Reno. Driven by a powerful Diesel engine and equipped with a ball-mill, class-ifier and agitator, the plant has a rated daily capacity of fifty tons and will use an all-slime cyanide process. Important ore bodies have been opened on the 400 and 500 levels of the mine, and about 8,000 tons of $10 ore are estimated by the management to be on the dumps.

Very few got any sleep on the boat with wide awake Cosbie to tell them about all the sights and Fields to be sure that when Cosbie was not talking he could outsnore the whistle on the boat. With a good day Saturday in Stockton and a good meal of pork and beans, no one on the boat could keep an eye open after 10 q. m. The scouts ar-rived home Sunday morning at 6 a. m. and all were willing to go again next year.

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS

The following announcement has been made by A. McSweeney, San Mateo County tax collector:

This office is charged with the collection of $2,067,731.14 for the year 1934, as against $1,199,790.76 for the year 1933, although the county tax rate fixed by the Board of Supervisors is lower by .034 than last year's rate. The reason for the larger amount to collect is owing to special district taxes in various parts of the county.

A special session of the Legislature, recently held, again reduced the penalty for redemption of delinquent properties, making it possible to pay on a straight 7 per cent basis on the total tax as against the old added penalty schedule. The sale at public auction of property was also postponed until the year 1937.

Mailing of the 1934 county tax bills, now under way, will take some time to have same distributed, but they should be in the hands of taxpayers by November 1.
